to be moved.

The body of Willie Dart, the lad who was drowned while bathing in the river at Fort Sherman's Landing, Miss., 35 miles from New Orleans last Wednesday. Oscar West, the local keeper, recovered the body and has it lying in the parlor of the Commercial Hotel.

Mr. J. C. Lawrence Hall, the very accommodating agent of the Anchor-Line Company, says that if this city is off on a brief summer sojourn in the next few days, he will start for it in Monday raising "halifax" because he has a connection on the Grand Trunk which is probably in Montreal to-day.

"I don't know," said Mr. Hall, "but I am in the lices he "runs" for here. Class will be happy where nine-tenths of the population are and their country."

Louis Glue-Denocrat, "Henry H. Ingraham, brother of Third-Clerk Ingraham, who is the Gold Dust victim, was a pilot of the ill-fated Steamer. He was blown overboard April 27, 1865. His body was never recovered. Ingraham was twenty-three years old and had three children.

such a similar way is a terrible blow to the parents. W. A. Ingraham had just turned his twenty-sixth year. Ingraham was a member of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch Cincinnati Time-Star. "There has been a curious interest in steamboat circles to know why the vote stood among the superintendents at the time the signals were given," says a friend of the first prize winner.

It appears that every supervising inspector voted against the change and five of the seven members of the committee, General Dumont, the inspector-general, was cast in favor of the change, and the majority of the years were as follows: First Prize, Mr. C. C. Smith, of the Third; Mr. Fehebrenbach, of the Fourth; Mr. Cook, of the Eighth, and Mr. C. C. Smith, of the Ninth; Mr. Bennis, of the First district; Mr. West, of the Fourth; Mr. Stephenson, of the Fifth; Mr. Carr, of the Sixth, and Mr. C. C. Smith, of the Ninth. The chairman of the committee recommending the change and individually proposed it was Mr. C. C. Smith, of the Ninth District. The change was made by the Colonists, but the fact of the Colonists

Merrill, major engineer of the Ohio Improvement Corps, went out on a boat to look for the missing man and be entitled to the full credit of it."

His correspondent Cincinnati Enquirer says: "Con Gallagher, who was killed by a falling tree while on duty as a resident of Cairo. In early years he was in the employ of the Halladay brothers, and was a very faithful and industrious man. He was a hard worker, and at the end of his earnings, at one time, about which he swears up in his coat for safety. One day, while he was at work, some heavy timber was being cut, and a log fell on him. It was a hard one on Con, who was then depressed over his loss that he took to his bed, and finally lost his place. He was a very good man, and was looking into a ditch where some men were working, when suddenly, with an explosion, a log fell on him. He was killed. It was a man, and literally tore the coat of his back. It was Con's old coat, and he died in it. He was a very good man, and he died on eight. As may be expected, the company was very much distressed, and the money away no long ago, and delight he found it all as he had it, and in good condition. The money he bought it from another, so well pleased with recovering his money that he never passed the matter up.

Dunham's Report About the Wound of the Gold Dust

St. Louis Globe-Democrat, 19th.

W. C. Dunham, of Cairo, who left on the relief trip Monday evening, was worse out, having been on duty, was scalded, but he stated that he did not discover a single victim who was burned. All were scalded.

He stated that he was so glad that Sonia is scalded, worse than any of those who up with us on the City of Allah. His wounds were frightfully scalded, but his neck was not so badly scalded. He was parboiled over a space as large as the Globe-Democrat. He will recover very soon.

Now about Lem Gray? He is pretty badly scalded, but not as
